Analyses and interprétation

We notice that from 2012 to 2014 there is a decreasing in accident's number and increasing of death's number. However between 2015 and 2016 the phenomenon is contrary. After analyses we noted that between 2012 and 2014 the more the number of accidents decrease the more the number of death increase. But on contrary between 2015 and 2016 we noted a decrease in death but an increase in the number of accidents.

Introduction

Today's road traffic in Niger faces many problems. These problems have become one of the major concerns of the Nigerien state given the countless road accidents. What are the causes and impacts of these accidents? How to mitigate this phenomenon?

Causes and Consequences

At the origin of an accident there is always a combination of multiple factors. Indeed, several factors lead to these accidents among which: non-mastery of the vehicle, non-compliance with the Highway Code, fatigue of drivers, imprudence, the bad state of the road.

Like any other plague, accidents also have impacts. These include loss of life, material damage, hospital over.

Solutions

To mitigate road accidents: the state must attract the attention of passengers in case of road innovations either by signs, posters or advertisements; Rehabilitate degraded roads. Although the State has its share of responsibility, but the burden is also placed on the users of the road. So they must: respect the code of the road and be very careful not to be surprised.

Conclusion

In the light of our analysis it can be noted that accidents are largely caused by non-compliance with the Highway Code and have serious consequences such as serious injuries or even losses in human lives.
